

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

THE BROOKE FAMILY OF WHITCHURCH

AND

---

THE little village of Whitchurch is situated in the northern part of Hampshire, England. Since Saxon times the place has always had a church built of the white stone found in the neighborhood; and thus the name—Whitchurch—originated. In the latter half of the sixteenth century there lived at Whitchurch, Richard Brooke, gentleman, and his wife, Elizabeth Twyne.<sup>1</sup> That they were people of means for those days is shown by the items in the will of Richard Brooke dividing among his children his "leases held by the Blessed Trinity in Winchester," his lease of Knoll, his woods in Chalgrove and Freefolk and the Manor of West Fosbury. To his wife he leaves his "free lands and tenements in Whitchurch and Freefolk" and his "lease of the parsonage of Whitchurch," their homestead.<sup>2</sup>

This house is built of brick in the open country a short distance beyond the church, which is at the western end of the village. In September, 1897, it still stood firm and sound, but with an addition on the side towards the open country away from the church and the village. In the old part there were three rooms on the lower floor. The biggest room, which served probably both as a reception and dining room, contained a large open fireplace. The room back of this, very likely, was the kitchen. In the small remaining room, perhaps the stairs stood. In the largest room on the upper floor, also possessed of a fine open fireplace, Charles the First passed a few days during the Civil War before the battle of Newberry in 1644. The brasses of Richard Brooke and his wife, together with

Richard and Elizabeth Brooke, as the inscription in the church tells us, were married in 1552 and had six children in all :

Thomas Brooke who married Susan Forster,
Richard who died without issue,
Dorothy who married Richard Venables,
Elizabeth,
Barbara,
Robert, a citizen of London, who married Mary Duncomb and had issue.

Thomas Brooke of Whitchurch, gentleman, the eldest son was born in 1560. He matriculated at New College, Oxford, November 24th, 1581, received the degree of B. A. May 4th, 1584, and was barrister at law in the Inner Temple in 1595; he sat for Whitchurch Borough in the Parliament that was summoned to meet at Westminster March 19th, 1603-4, and was dissolved February 9th, 1610-11, and died in 1612.<sup>3</sup> He married Susan Forster.

Symonds<sup>4</sup> in his diary of the marches of the Royal Army thus describes a monument erected to their memory.

“Whit-church Church.”

“Against the north wall chancel, a faire monument, the statue of a man in a barr-gowne, and a woman:

The monument is in the belfry, and is made of the stone of the neighborhood. They lie outstretched side by side; their heads, collars, hands, and cuffs are white; the rest of their dress is black, except that the middle of her gown in front from top to bottom is a light red.

Susan Forster's father, Sir Thomas Forster, was born about 1569, and belonged to the Forster family of Northumberland;<sup>6</sup> he was spoken of first in 1587 as a barrister in both Coke's and Croke's Reports; he became a reader of the Society of the Inner Temple in 1596; he was called on November 24th, 1607, to the bench as judge of the Common Pleas, and sat in that Court for four years and a half; he died May 18th, 1612, and was buried at Hunsdon, in Herefordshire. Thomas Sutton named him one of the first governors of his hospital—the Charter House.<sup>7</sup> His youngest son, Robert Forster, was created January 27th, 1640, judge of the Common Pleas, but as he adhered during the Civil War to the Royal cause, he was deposed from the bench. After the restoration, Charles the Second recalled him to his seat, and on October 21st, 1660, appointed him Chief-Justice of the King's Bench; this office he held until his death, October 4th, 1663. He was buried in the church at Egham.<sup>8</sup> “MARYLAND, 18th July, 1720.

Sir Thomas Forster was the son of Thomas Forster of Hunsdon in Co. Hertford, and grandson of Roger Forster of the Forsters of North-

“MY LORD,

“The Government here being in me at present under the Lord Proprietor, I take it to be my indisputable duty to do all I can to promote the true interest of the Church of England established in this Province, as well as I am firmly attached to it by my judgment and inclination.

“I with great pleasure congratulate your Lordship on the happy prospect we have (by the good conduct and example of your Commissary, the Rev<sup>d</sup> Mr. Henderson) of putting an end to the unhappy disputes that were on purpose raised among the Clergy about matters that no way concerned their duty (viz<sup>t</sup>), endeavours to misrepresent our Lord Proprietor. And I can with great truth say that no noblemen can do

“As this is an happy prospect, and promises me much ease and satisfaction so long as I shall have the honor of governing, so I humbly pray your Lordship’s assistance to perfect so good beginnings by your paternal Injunctions to the Clergy to promote and forward them. Colonel Brooke married first Anne ———, who joined him in a deed dated Feb. 23rd, 1687.

They had

1. Thomas Brooke, who married Lucy Smith.
2. Eleanor Brooke, who married first John Tasker, and second Charles Sewall.
3. Sarah Brooke, who married Philip Lee.

Colonel Brooke married second Barbara (born in 1676 and died in 1754)<sup>35</sup>, youngest daughter of

<sup>35</sup>The will of Barbara Brooke, widow, was drawn Feb. 4th, 1748-9, and sworn to January 26th, 1754. Record of Wills, No. 1, folio 470, Prince George County, Md.

Thomas Dent, of St. Mary's County, and Rebecca<sup>36</sup> his wife, daughter of the Rev. William Wilkinson. Thomas Brooke and Barbara Dent were married before January 4th, 1699-1700, for on that date she joins him in a deed.<sup>37</sup>

Colonel Brooke and Barbara Dent, his second wife, had issue, but the order of birth is not certain, the following children :<sup>38</sup>

Thomas Brooke.

Nathaniel Brooke.

John Brooke.

Benjamin Brooke.

Baker Brooke.

Mary Brooke, who married Dr. Patrick Sim, of Prince George County.

Rebecca Brooke, who married John Howard of Charles County.

Priscilla Brooke, who married Thomas Gantt.

Jane Brooke, who married Alexander Contee.

Elizabeth Brooke, who married Colonel George Beall.

Lucy Brooke, who married Thomas Hodgkin.

<sup>36</sup>Thomas Dent died in 1676; Rebecca, his widow, married secondly Mr. John Adison, also mentioned as Colonel John Adison, of Charles and St. Mary's Counties, as his property was in both counties. On October 19th, 1677, she was cited to account for her execution of the estate of her late husband, Thomas Dent, and craved time until her husband, Colonel John Adison, returned to the province; this request was granted. He was in the Scottish army which fought against Cromwell at the battle of Dunbar in 1650, where he was taken prisoner and soon after transported to Maryland, where he lived, first in Calvert County and afterwards in Prince George County.<sup>41</sup> Of a strong character, he became in a short time, with his knowledge of arms, a man of importance in the military forces of the province. He was very busy fighting the Indians until the end of his life, rising higher and higher until he became a full Colonel.<sup>42</sup>

<sup>41</sup>There is a record of him in the Maryland Land Office of the year 1658 (Liber 5 Folio 416). By the family and in Georgetown the name Beall, is pronounced as if it were spelt "bell." Although the scribes at Annapolis spelt Ninian Beall's name in many ways, his descendants now all spell the name, "Beall." By an act of May 15th, 1751, the Legislature of Maryland provided for laying out a town on the Potomac River, above Rock Creek. For this purpose part of George Beall's land was taken, as well as part of that belonging to a Mr. Gordon. When, in spite of their refusal to sell, the land so taken was divided into lots, Colonel Beall and Mr. Gordon were allowed the privilege of first selecting two lots each as compensation for their lands. After a week's reflection, George Beall sent the following answer :

Elizabeth Beall was born in Georgetown in 1762 and died there June 27th, 1827. On July 10th, 1781, she was married by the Rev. Isaac Stockton Keith to the Rev. Stephen Bloomer Balch, then Rector of the Presbyterian Church of Georgetown. The ladies of Georgetown being patriotic, positively refused to drink tea during the progress of the Revolution, and so the cups used at the wedding were not much larger than thimbles.<sup>58</sup> Dr. Balch was the son of James Balch and was born April 5th, 1747, on Deer Creek, Harford County, Maryland. Lower Marlboro, Calvert County, Maryland, where he took charge of a classical academy. On October 1st, 1775, he was commissioned captain in the Calvert County militia: he held this command for three years and was in actual service against the enemy from December 1st, 1775, to December 1st, 1777.<sup>59</sup> When the British appeared on the shores of the Patuxent River and Chesapeake Bay, he marched out with his company to assist in repulsing them. He was in a number of actions, and though frequently offered promotion, declined it, inasmuch as he thought he could be of more service on the Chesapeake border, with all of which he was familiar from childhood, and at the same time could continue his preparation for the ministry. In 1778 when the feeling was universal that, owing to the defeat of Burgoyne (1777) and the French alliance, our independence was secured, and the acknowledgment of it was merely a question of time, he resigned from the service in order to give himself up more assiduously to his clerical duties.

In 1780 he was called by the Presbyterians of Georgetown on the Potomac to establish a church among them. Accepting, he arrived there March 16th, 1780, and remained in charge of the church he founded, until his death fifty-three years afterwards.

Among his friends were Thomas Jefferson and Albert Gallatin. A few weeks after the death of General Washington, Dr. Balch gave notice that he would speak of the life and services of the departed statesman. He preached in the open air to more than a thousand people, from the last verse of the tenth chapter of the book of Esther, "For Mordecai the Jew, was next unto King Ahasuerus, and great among the Jews, and accepted of the multitude of his brethren, seeking the wealth of his people, and speaking peace to all his seed." He was a firm believer in the rights of the individual and was in favor of gradually liberating the slaves and sending them to Liberia. He had a robust, vigorous constitution and a bold honest countenance. He was a lover of books, and among the classics he preferred Horace to Virgil.

"On Sunday morning, September 22, 1833, at nine o'clock A. M., as he was preparing to go to church to perform his official duties," Mr. Jackson of Georgetown says,<sup>60</sup> "he was stricken with apoplexy and sank to rest like the sun without a cloud to hide his lustre. As the news of his death spread through the town the citizens, irrespective of religious creed, expressed themselves with one accord: 'Well done, good and faithful servant, enter thou into the joy of thy Lord.' A successful plaster cast of his face was taken just after his death. On Monday the Board of Aldermen and Common Council of Georgetown passed the following resolution:

" 'That we have learned with deep regret the death of our aged and venerable fellow citizen, Doctor Stephen Bloomer Balch, who for more than fifty-three years, has been a useful and honored minister of religion in the town, illustrating the holy profession he made through his long career by a life of uniform piety towards God, and benevolence, liberality and kindness to his fellow men, descending to his tomb full of years, and rich in the reverence, esteem and love of the whole community.

" 'Resolved, that as a testimony of respect to his memory, the members and officers of this corporation will attend his funeral to-morrow (Tuesday) at ten o'clock A. M.

" 'Resolved, that the clerk of the corporation be requested to transmit a copy of these resolutions to the family of the deceased.'

" The town was draped in mourning, business places were closed, and all the bells tolled as the remains of this faithful apostle of God were carried from his residence, No. 3302 N Street, to the church where he had so often performed the last sad rites to hundreds and thousands. Ministers of all denominations, including eight priests, representing the Catholic Church, who had loved and venerated him in life, joined in the funeral cortege. When the hearse reached the church the procession was still forming at the residence.

"The funeral sermon, an eloquent discourse on the life and services of the deceased, was preached by the Rev. Elijah Harrison, of Alexandria, Virginia, from Acts viii. 2: 'And devout men carried Stephen to his burial, and made great lamentation over him.' After the funeral sermon his remains were incased in the front wall of the church.

"His life was checkered with many severe trials. Dug out of one home, flooded out of another and burnt out of a third, yet his fortitude and piety, resignation and cheerfulness forsook him not. Keeping his eye steadfastly fixed on his sacred calling, he was to his expiring day faithful to his Master.

"In October, 1835, a handsome monument was erected by his family to his memory in front of the church he founded and so long presided over. It was of white marble, representing a pyramidal tablet resting upon a solid Ionic base against the wall between the doors of the main entrance, with no other ornament than a wreath beautifully sculptured at the top. It bore the following inscription:

'Sacred
 To the memory of Stephen Balch, D. D.
 Who died September 22, 1833,
 In the eighty-seventh year of his age.
 He was the founder of this church,
 And for more than half a century
 Its revered pastor.
 He planted the gospel in this town,
 And his example was for many years
 A light to its inhabitants.

"In the spring of 1873, when the church was demolished, his remains were reinterred in the Presbyterian cemetery on 33rd Street near the chapel. In the spring of 1874 the philanthropic William W. Corcoran wrote to his children requesting the privilege of removing the remains to Oak Hill cemetery. Writing to his son, the Rev. Thomas B. Balch, he said: 'I knew your father from boyhood, and the sentiments of profound esteem with which at an early age I regarded him were undiminished at the close of his protracted and exemplary life.' And on June 18, 1874, the remains of this apostle of God were reinterred near the Swiss Chapel in Oak Hill cemetery. A mural tablet ordered by W. W. Corcoran was mounted on the wall of the Swiss Chapel bearing the following inscription in letters of gold:

ii. Catherine Balch, born November 28th, 1815.

iii. Virginia Balch, born March 18th, 1818.

iv. Thomas Balch, born July 23d, 1821. He studied two years at Columbia College, and then read law with Stephen Cambreling and was admitted to the Bar. In an open letter, to which Horace Greeley gave a place in the New York Tribune, on May 13th, 1865, he was the first to propose that the Alabama and other differences then pending between the United States and England should be decided by a Court of Arbitration; from that seed the Geneva Tribunal (1872) grew. From 1859 to 1873 he lived in Europe, residing chiefly at Paris. While there he wrote and published in 1872 an account of the part that the French took in the War of Independence: it was entitled Les Français en Amérique pendant la Guerre de l'Indépendance des États-Unis, 1777-1783. In July, 1876, as one of the Congress of Authors, he contributed a biographical sketch of Dr. William Shippen, "the Elder," a member of the Continental Congress. He married at Woodfield, her father's country place in Philadelphia County, Emily Swift, daughter of Joseph Swift and his wife, Eliza Moore Willing, and granddaughter of Samuel Swift and his wife, Mary, daughter of Lieutenant-Colonel Joseph Shippen.<sup>63</sup>
